Teaching

Courses Taught (4)

Teaching &amp; Learning with Technology (Undergraduate, online, 6x)	2017-present
* Course topics include design thinking, universal design for learning, media & information literacy, professional learning networks, computational thinking, and play-based learning.
* Students develop plans for integrating technology in classroom.
* The semester-long project is to design a professional online portfolio .
Learning Technology by Design (Master's, online, 3x)	2018-present
* Course topics include design thinking, the design process (empathize, define, ideate, prototype, test), designing for learners, iterative design. and collaboration in design.
* Students discuss examples of good and bad designs from everyday life.
* The semester-long project is to work through one cycle of the design process to address a problem of practice from the student's professional context.
Electronic Assessment for Teaching and Learning (Master's, online, 2x)	2018-present
* Course topics include foundational theories of assessment, formative assessment, feedback, and a critical examination of methods for assessment (e.g., portfolios, rubrics, surveys, tests, self-evaluations).

- * Students develop an assessment design checklist to use in their own professional practice.
- * The semester-long project is to plan a formative assessment design to implement in their own context.

Teaching Students Online (Master's, online, 1x)

2017

- * Course topics include foundations for online learning, course management systems, various models of online course design, instructor-student communication, assessment, universal design for learning, and online classroom management.
- * Students playfully explore Google Apps, course management systems, screencasting tools, and file management systems.
- * The semester-long project is to design a curriculum for an online course module consisting of 3-5 interconnected lessons, which may include training sessions or non-traditional courses.
